> Every Thursday, a small van parks beside Mhlabeni Community Hall. It carries books, newspapers and a few tablets loaded with reading activities. The service began when residents noticed that many children travelled far to reach the nearest library. Volunteer Naledi records which books are borrowed so the team can bring popular titles next time. The tablets work offline, so learners can use them even when the mobile signal is weak. Adults may also borrow newspapers and ask volunteers for help with online forms. The service cannot visit every street each week, so residents suggest stops at a monthly meeting. Naledi says the van is useful because people help shape its route.

1.1 Name three services the van offers and state where it stops each Thursday. [6]

1.2 Explain why the service records borrowed books and uses offline tablets. [7]

1.3 What does Naledi mean when she says residents help shape the route? [8]

1.4 Rewrite 'The tablets work offline, so learners can use them even when the mobile signal is weak' as two sentences without changing its meaning. Preserve both facts and their cause-and-effect link; check grammar, capitals and punctuation, and do not add a new claim. [9]

1.5 In a short paragraph, evaluate one strength and one limitation of the travelling library service. [10]
